Palace admits PP 1017 pulled GMA ratings down

MALACAÑANG CONCEDED YESTERDAY THAT President Macapagal-Arroyo's declaration of a state of national emergency might have made her more unpopular with a growing number of Filipinos, as a nationwide survey had shown.

Speaking in a radio interview, Press Secretary Ignacio Bunye quoted Felipe Miranda, head of the survey firm Pulse Asia Inc., as saying that it were not for Presidential Proclamation No. 1017.

SAYING HE HAD NO ENEMIES EXCEPT ILOCOS Sur Gov. Luis "Chavit" Singson, the family of slain businessman Leonardo Ilmale yesterday offered a P10-million reward for anyone with information about the four gunmen linked to the murder and their mastermind.

THEY WERE ONLY AT Roxas Boulevard for a walk, so they claimed.

But police wondered why they were all wearing black T-shirts and immediately pounced on them.

Members of the Western Police District arrested early evening yesterday former Social Welfare and Development Secretary Corazon "Dinky" Soliman for alleged illegal assembly.

Soliman was arrested together with Vicente Romano, lead convenor of the Black and White Movement (BWM), a group seeking President Macapagal-Arroyo's resignation.

FVR to Gringo: Stop dreaming, surrender

By Cynthia D. Balana

IF FORMER PRESIDENT FIDEL Ramos has any advice to former Sen. Gregorio "Gringo" Honasan, it is for him to stop dreaming.

"They always said 'The Dream Will Never Die.' You know, that is really a fantasy. It's not invented by him. That is Diana Ross," Ramos said, referring to the American iconic pop singer of the Supremes.

"Why pursue something that's really not of your own invention? Of course, to romanticists, idealists, that is a very valid ambition," Ramos added. He was alluding to Honasan's long-running campaign for political reforms and change.

Ramos was Armed Forces Chief of Staff when troops captured the then also fugitive Honasan while the charismatic officer was reportedly hiding under a bed in Valle Verde, Pasig in 1987.

Also linked to coup attempts, Honasan escaped months later from a Navy ship where he was being held, with all his guards. He resurfaced in 1992 after four years in hiding.

Speaking to reporters, Ramos called on Honasan to come out and face the rebellion charges against him, saying the former senator was too well known a public figure to go on hiding and no longer the dashing Gringo that he used to be.

Ramos issued the appeal after the police said that it had put up a P5 million bounty for Honasan's capture so he could answer coup charges for his alleged involvement in the 2003 Oakwood mutiny.

"It's really so degrading for him

Biazon: Be careful in handling Honasan

By Dona Z. Pazzibugan and TJ Burgonio

SAYING FORMER SEN. GREGORIO Honasan was no ordinary man, Sen. Rodolfo Biazon warned the administration to exercise care in handling its case against the former colonel it had accused of involvement in a coup plot.

"They should be careful with him. Gringo is not an ordinary citizen. He used to be a senator. He has a following in and out of the military," Biazon said during a dinner on Thursday with the Inquirer staff.

"What they are doing could temporarily suppress the perceived threat coming from Gringo's direction, but it can also be double-bladed."

Biazon said a mishandling of Honasan's case could fuel more restiveness among his supporters.

"It can arouse feelings from the

THE SPOKESPERSON CLAMS UP.

Ignoring furious protests among lawmakers, the Armed Forces did not take back the claims made by its public information officer (PIO) chief, Col. Tristan Kison, that the military played a make-or-break role in President Macapagal-Arroyo's political survival.

Without bothering to explain himself, Kison would no longer take calls from reporters after his statement Wednesday that the "the nation will collapse" if the military gave in to pressure to withdraw support from the President.

The statement was roundly rebuked by lawmakers but Kison refused to take it back.

Brig. Gen. Jose Honrado, an Air Force general who was castigated by a military court for preempting its ruling in the Oakwood mutiny case, was suddenly reappointed as AFP spokesperson.

Fil-American doctor keeps coming home to give back

By Christian V. Esguerra

FOR MANY, IT WAS THEIR FIRST TIME TO see a doctor.

They came in droves from all over Negros—some in bare feet—packing the gymnasium, the usual site of the medical mission, recalled Dr. Leo Gangoy, a family medicine specialist from Virginia and a graduate of the Southwestern University College of Medicine in Cebu.

In three days, Gangoy and his wife Carolina, a nurse, saw a whopping 3,800 patients in a small town in Negros last January. They ran out of supplies which they had brought from the United States and had to make local purchases.

Gangoy went to the United States long before his compatriots began flocking abroad to work as doctors, nurses and caregivers. But unlike many of them, this retired US Navy captain would return home with a team of Filipino and American doctors for a weeklong medical mission. He has been doing so for the past 20 years.

Every year since the 1980s, the medical mission would fly in and visit the poorest barangays in the country. It was the team's way of giving back the blessings they were given, Gangoy said.

"The poor people here cannot be compared elsewhere—they're really poor," he said in an interview with the Inquirer.

Through the years, Gangoy has witnessed the worsening health condition in the Philippines, especially in the wake of the massive exodus of doctors and nurses.

The World according to V

'V for Vendetta' artist David Lloyd speaks on the excitement of seeing his work come alive on the big screen and the powerful memory of working with Alan Moore

By Rod S. de Vera

THERE REMAIN SOME fortuitous happenings in the world. "V for Vendetta" artist David Lloyd, for one, is quite pleased with what has come out of his work. "It's a great piece of work," he says of the film adaptation of his graphic novel collaboration with comic book genius Alan Moore. "I think the script is very good. It does take out a lot of the story and some of the characters. I think that it is something that had to be done, because it would have been a long film had they done a complete book-to-screen adaptation."

Watch the road!

By Albert Pili

IF YOU'VE GOT A HUMMER OR YOU'RE THINKing about owning one, how about a watch to match? You'll always be in the driver's seat with TechnoMarine's new Hummer watch that packs in a whole lot of attitude in its super-sized design. This timepiece takes its inspiration right from the road to the wrist. This Hummer watch features design elements straight from the vehicle including a tire-tread rubber strap, signature seven-spoke rim seconds movement and a 43-mm case reminiscent of the Hummer grille. Leave it to TechnoMarine to push the envelope and conjure up a winner.
